Does Internalized Acceptance of Domestic Violence Reduce Antenatal Care Utilization? Evidence from MICS Bangladesh 2019

- Conducted independent empirical research investigating whether women's internalized acceptance of domestic violence reduces the probability of receiving 4+ antenatal care visits in Bangladesh.
- Applied Probit regression and three PSM specifications (nearest neighbor, caliper, and kernel matching) using Stata; theoretical grounding in Andersen's Behavioral Model and Kandiyoti's Patriarchal Bargaining Theory.
- Supervisor: Dr. Rubaiya Murshed, Department of Economics, University of Dhaka.
